To Whom It May Concern:

Paul Svensson translated Lux Scientiae's WebMail application from English into Swedish. For this project he was required to use our proprietary online content management tools for entering, tracking, and previewing all of translated text. I was extremely impressed by Paul's combination of technical savvy and linguistic expertise. His translations were executed extremely promptly and accurately, and well within our scheduled timeframe. Even more importantly, Paul pointed out several ways in which we could improve our translation management tools for more efficient use, and discovered several deficiencies in our linguistic dictionary preventing it from being well translated into all of our target languages. Based on his incisive suggestions, we now have a much more robust lexicon and more useful translation management tools. I would give Paul Svensson's services my highest recommendation for professional, expedient, and proactive translations.
